SOME REASONS FOR GIVING THANKS

Let us give thanks that the awful "flu" has reached its Waterloo; That Wilhelmine and his satanic crew have been taught at last a thing or two.

And thanks for the boys who cannot Autocracy;

Who made the whole world safe for democracy;

Who changed the "Deutschland über alles,"

To Uber Deutschland Allies.

O, thanks for the boys of the shell torn fields,

Who coolly faced the German steel;

Who forced the stubborn foe to yield,

And the invincible Hindenburg to reel.

But alas! some sleep on Flanders' Field.

And some beneath the ocean's wave;

They gave their lives that we might live

In homes unmenced by the Tyrant Knave.

Oh, loved ones who bide on Flanders' Field,

Or rest beneath the ocean's wave;

For you our hearts doth sadly yield

A prayer of gratitude to-day.

—A Berea Worker.

A QUIET LIFE THAT COUNTED

Mr. Knight has recently returned from a hurried trip to Western New York—his old home—where he was called to conduct the funeral services of Mrs. Jane Farrington, a lady 98 years of age, whose long life of unselfish kindness earned for her the affectionate title of "Aunt Jane."

During her lifetime she saw the development of transportation from the first clumsy steam engines to the great electric locomotive. She watched the development of the bicycle, the automobile, the flying machine, and the submarine. She witnessed the improvement of lighting from the tallow candle (which she always preferred) to the electric lamp; the telegraph, telephone, phonograph, and moving picture have all arrived since she first saw day.

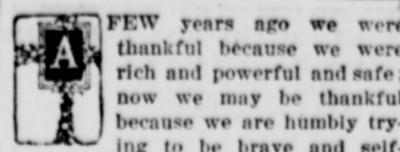

She lived to hear the news of victory in the Mexican, Civil, Spanish-American and World wars.

She passed with serenity through twenty-four presidential administrations, and cast her first vote last summer with the other women of the Empire State.

Since the war began she has spent most of her time knitting socks for the soldiers. And in recognition of this service and her great age she received personal letters of thanks and congratulation from President Woodrow Wilson, quiet home life is lived for God.

For two-thirds of a century she has been a follower of Jesus Christ, and one who always and everywhere practiced the Golden Rule. Her life is a shining example of the nation-wide influence for good that is possible when even a quiet home life is lived for God.

Greatest Day of Thanksgiving That Our Beloved Nation Has Ever Known

FEW years ago we were thankful because we were rich and powerful and safe; now we may be thankful because we are humbly trying to be brave and self-sacrificing and virtuous. Therefore this is by far the greatest Thanksgiving day that this nation has known. The day, therefore, should be not only one of thanksgiving but of consecration. The American people can now see that there is in this world something greater than the accumulation of wealth, and that life has values which they have not before appreciated. After all our efforts to eliminate pain from the world, we may learn that pain has a high disciplinary value—that there is such a thing as perfection through suffering.

Our sacrifice in behalf of the world's peace, safety and honor is just beginning to be offered. Treasure and life will have to be poured out in unstinted measure if this war is to be won—as it will be. The American people should be deeply thankful that they are called to this great service, which is nothing more than the return that they owe to humanity for the wonderful blessings that have been showered upon them.

"That I may know the fellowship of His sufferings"—such was the prayer of the apostle. Through their participation in the sorrow and suffering of their brethren the American people may develop a purer, stronger, more exalted and spiritual life than any they have hitherto known. The very somberness with which the day is enshrouded ought therefore to serve to glorify it. This year, of all years, we are thankful not for what we have but for what we are able to do, and for the opportunity and will to do it.

PARAGUAY HAS GREAT FETE

Manifestation Over Victory of the Entente Allies Breaks All Records.

Ascension, Paraguay, Nov. 25.—The greatest manifestation in the history of Paraguay took place Friday in celebration of the victory of the entente allies over the German allies. It was participated in by the entire diplomatic and consul corps, officials of the Paraguayan government and almost the entire population.

French Senate Honors Wilson.

Paris, Nov. 25.—The French senate has passed unanimously the motion already adopted by the chamber of deputies, paying homage to President Wilson as "having deserved well of humanity." The motion pays the same honor to the allied nations and their chiefs.

The Governor of New York, and the President of France which last sent her his photograph with his personal signature.

For two-thirds of a century she has been a follower of Jesus Christ, and one who always and everywhere practiced the Golden Rule. Her life is a shining example of the nation-wide influence for good that is possible when even a quiet home life is lived for God.

ARMY DEMOBILIZATION

Soldiers Will Be Permitted to Return to Civil Life as Rapidly as Military and Industrial Conditions Permit

A plan is now being formulated by the Federal authorities for the reduction of the number of men in our army and navy to keep pace with the probable rapid decrease in the requirements for such forces.

Questionnaires have been sent by the War Industries Board to industrial establishments of all kinds throughout the country for the purpose of securing information as to their needs for men. The employment Service of the U.S. Department of Labor is using its extensive facilities in the effort to secure necessary information in the matter. New bureaus will also probably be established in the War and Navy Departments to aid in this important work of seeing to it that discharged soldiers and sailors secure suitable employment without delay or difficulty and without undue disturbance of labor conditions when they leave the service.

Hun War Craft Interned.
Amsterdam.—Eleven German torpedo boats and nine destroyers that were left in the Antwerp harbor have been interned in a Dutch port.

HARLAN FRANKLIN'S LETTER

November 2, 1918.

Dear Professor Edwards:

Received your letter of October 3rd and was glad to hear from you. I am sure pleased to hear that Berea has a good bunch of students this fall and that you have a training school there. I hope they will make a success of it.

I am well and getting along fine as can be. I am fully recovered from my cold which came near being influenza.

We have some hopes of getting back to the front this winter. Our Major is now at the front getting instructions on new guns we hope to get if we do go back to the front. They're only toy guns with a range of forty miles or about seventy kilometers. The whole battalion is anxious to get them, because they are the worst friends the Huns have on the Western Front. We stand a good chance because we are the oldest R. A. R. men in this part of France. My battery holds an excellent record, with two battles and seventeen engagements to her credit, with only about twenty men wounded.

Winter is coming here for sure, at last. They say it gets pretty cold but I think I can stand it all right. Write when you have time.

Yours sincerely,
Pvt. Harlan Franklin,

FRENCH DECORATE AMERICAN GRAVES

In a recent number of the Saturday Evening Post the writer of an interesting article describes the scene in a French cemetery on All-Souls' Day. The occasion was the decoration of the graves of our American boys, who were buried there, by a delegation of French citizens from a neighboring village. In conversation with the writer of the article a member of the delegation spoke as follows:

"We desire that the name of each family that adopts a grave may be registered, so that, should the adults die, the children of the next generation, as a sacred charge, may carry on the obligation which is now to be laid upon their parents and transmitted as a legacy to all who bear their name. We would make sure of this, so that, no matter how long your fallen bravies rest in the soil of France, their graves shall not be as the neglected graves of strangers to us, but, symbolic at least, may be the graves of our dead sons.

"We wish to do these things for more reasons than one: We wish to do them because thereby we may express in our own small, poor way the gratitude we feel to America. We wish to do them because of the thought that some stricken mother across the seas in America will perhaps feel a measure of comfort and consolation in knowing the grave of her boy shall always be

Train Is Torpedoed By Villa.
Juarez.—Villa followers, commanded by Epinifano Holguin, attacked the Mexican Central railroad station at Villa Ahumada, 80 miles south of here, and later torpedoed a south-bound freight train on the same road. According to the official account of the affair, given out by Major J. Gomez Tagle, in command of the garrison here, Holguin's band, which consisted of 80 men, was driven off after an engagement lasting less than an hour.

War-Time Regulations Removed.
El Paso, Tex.—Suspension of the war-time regulations and restrictions on travel across the border to and from Mexico was announced by F. W. Berkshire, supervisor for the immigration service in this district.

sent to Paint Lick today for burial.

Official announcement was made this week that the machinery for the mustering out of soldiers of Camp Zachary Taylor slated to return to civil life would swing into full operation Tuesday morning. At the rate of 1,000 a day the soldiers will leave the camp. After ten days of strenuous work, Lieut. Col. H. H. Elrath, camp executive officer, announced that everything was ready. Before the week end at least 10,000 men will be returned home from this camp.

Following the arrival of an essential discharge blank, everything needed for the discharge of the men was at hand. Medical officers have been busy examining men selected to discharge for several days. In the Field Artillery Central Officers' Training School nearly 13,000 men have been examined physically for discharges. It is considered likely that the school will start first.

A wreck near the Richmond depot, caused by freight train No. 44 smashing into the caboose of another freight which had been left on the main track while some switching was being done, tore up considerable portion of trackage in the local yards early Tuesday morning. All traffic was delayed several hours. The big mogul engine, pulling the north bound train, was hurled off the track and turned sideways to the other cars. A wrecker was brought from Corbin and another from Covington to repair the damage, but it was late in the day before passenger trains could get by and resume their schedules.

In the oil industry, Kentucky will unquestionably continue to take a leading part. What this means to the people of Kentucky, very few realize. The Cumberland pipe line, alone, is taking out of Kentucky every week, approximately 100,000 barrels of oil, which estimated at $2.60 per barrel, means $260,000 paid out weekly in Kentucky. If it be true, as some well posted oil operators believe, that this is about one half of the oil being produced in Kentucky, it will be readily ob-

Italian and French ambassadors and the American peace delegation will cross on the same ship with the President. Preparations for the President's trip are progressing rapidly, though still surrounded with secrecy. No one professes to know when the start will be made or just who will make up the party. Many messages from England, France and Italy say the President's presence is essential.

Amsterdam.—The Frankfurter Zeitung publishes an advertisement of a "diplomatic attache in the highest position, tall, good-looking, thirty, free-thinker, son of an excellency" who wants a wife "from the best family, with a fortune permitting her to become the wife of a future German ambassador." He explains that he advertises because there are no dances or dinners during the war.

FEAR FRENCH TANKS

Machines Spread Terror in Ranks of Foe.

Armed Car Helps 15 Yanks to Capture 700 Huns in Recent Drive.

With the American Armies.—Greater laurels daily are being won by the French light tanks which are co-operating with the American forces in pushing the Germans back toward the Rhine.

Among the many individual feats of the tanks and their drivers which have come to light, one of the most interesting is that of Brigadier Cellier, who has been decorated with the cross of the Legion of Honor for his work in a light tank which enabled 15 American soldiers to capture 700 Germans.

Several hundred of these tanks led the counter-offensive from the Villers-Cotterets forest in July, which marked what appears to have been the turning point of the war. They broke through the enemy's lines, destroying his machine guns, overcoming strong centers of resistance and spreading panic and demoralization in the German ranks.

Where the infantry was preceded by the "chars d'assaut," as the French call them, the advance was three miles a day.

It was these same French light tanks which preceded the Americans in their advance upon Juvigny and Terny on the Soissons plateau. One of them, manned by a lieutenant, killed more than 200 Germans on the plateau.

Documents that have come into the hands of the French staff show that the Germans are greatly worried by the light tanks and are studiously coaching their men in methods of defense against them.

The light cars have the advantage of greater speed and of being more easily handled than the heavier tanks.

They require a crew of only two men, a driver and a gunner, and carry one one-and-a-half-inch gun and a machine gun.

CUT OUT FISH," SAYS EDITOR

Walter Consults Head Waiter and Assistant and Then Uses a Knife.

London.—Dr. E. J. Wheeler, editor of Public Opinion, looks the part of an eminent scholar, but he speaks United States idiom, occasionally to the mystification of waiters who served him during the tour of the American editors.

Wheeler arrived in the dining room for dinner and, having an engagement immediately after, decided to have dinner as quickly as possible.

"I will have no soup and you can cut out the fish," he told an attentive Swiss.

The waiter withdrew silently. Presently he was observed in earnest consultation with the head waiter. The latter dignitarily called another waiter into conference. After few minutes' deliberation, heads close, the waiter slipped away and came back with a knife.

He picked up the platter and, going to Wheeler's place, very carefully extracted the fish bones.

That, the editors understand, is Swiss for "cut out the fish."

"Fifty miles from a 'wire' station, five miles from a telephone," writes Shelby D. Watts, Red Cross Home Service field agent, to James L. Fieger, Lake Division director of Civilian Relief.

Mr. Watts, besides carrying, visiting and organizing Home Service sections in Red Cross chapters, is doing Home Service case work in the untraveled mountains of Kentucky wherever he finds afflicted families.

His latest report to headquarters, besides the usual statistics reads:

"There are only some five hundred people now sick with the 'flu' in this district. About a half dozen families have no one to give medicine or care for them at all—every member of the family being down. I cared for a family of eight today, all bed-fast. I gave medicine, cooked potatoes, boiled or coddled soft-boiled eggs, washed dishes, cleaned up generally, cut wood, built the fire, nursed the baby and milked two cows, riding home five miles in the dark over creeks and mountains. The horse went some, too.

This is a sample of the work needed to be done, but every man here has a job nursing his family or relatives or neighbors."

The Military Relief Department of the American Red Cross is to have a representative and a staff at each of the General Hospitals now being opened throughout the country for sick and disabled soldiers.

In the Lake Division Red Cross territory these hospitals are to be located at the Cincinnati East High School, at the Deaf and Dumb Institute at Columbus, the Richman Brothers model factory at Cleveland, the State Hospital at Lima and at the former health resort at West Baden, Ind.

Edward B. Greene, director of the Red Cross Department of Military Relief in the Lake Division, is authority for the statement that the Red Cross will have a staff at each of the above institutions.

"These staffs," says Mr. Greene, "will largely parallel, in their makeup and activities, the staffs that we now have and have had for months at all the big military training camps in this country. The size of the staffs will vary, but it is quite likely that for a hospital of 4,500 beds we will have a field director, an assistant field director, two or three associate directors and one or two stenographers.

Our field director at each hospital is to have charge of all activities of outside organizations that wish to volunteer their services for hospital work. It goes without saying, however, that these Red Cross field directors will be responsible to the commanding officers of the hospitals and will neither plan nor permit activities which do not meet with the complete approval of the commanding officers.

The staff men will attend to such

MOUNTAIN AGRICULTURE

Conducted by Mr. Robert F. Spence, Farm Demonstrator and Special Investigator

FARMING PROBLEMS IN 1919 To the Farmers and the Agricultural Forces of the United States:

During the period since we entered the war the farmers of the Nation have responded magnificently to the appeals for increased production, and all the people have complied with the urgent requests for fuller conservation. During this present fall season our farmers have planted an increased wheat acreage and a large acreage in rye. It is too early now to make detailed suggestions for the spring planting season. We do not know how the fall grains will come through the winter and we are not able to forecast the demands and the conditions which will prevail after the first of the year.

This Department, the agricultural colleges and other organizations will continue to give definite help to all the problems, and at the proper time will lay the situation before you.

Two things seem to be clear:

One is that for a considerable period the world will have need particularly of a larger supply than normal of live stock, and especially of fats. We should not fail, therefore, to adopt every feasible means of economically increasing our live stock products. As a part of our program we should give due thought to the securing of an adequate supply of feed stuffs and to the eradication and control of all forms of animal disease.

The other is the need of perfecting the organization of our agricultural agencies for the purpose of intelligently executing such a program as may seem wise. We should not only have the best possible organization and co-operation of the Department of Agriculture, the agricultural colleges, the State departments of agriculture and farmers' associations, but we should especially strengthen the local farm bureaus and other organizations which support so effectively the extension forces and assist them in their activities. The perfecting of this organization is highly desirable not only during the continuance of the present abnormal conditions but also for the future. The local as well as the State and Federal agencies are of supreme importance to the Nation in all its activities designed to make rural life more profitable, healthful and attractive, and, therefore, to secure adequate economic production, efficient distribution and necessary conservation.

The main purpose of this appeal is to direct attention to the necessity of continuing our state of preparedness and of strengthening the foundations of our agriculture.

Secretary of Agriculture.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Teacher of English Bible in the Moody
Bible Institute of Chicago.)

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 8

JOSEPH MADE RULER OF EGYPT.

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 41:33-44.
GOLDEN TEXT—He that is faithful in a very little is faithful also in much.
Luke 16:10.

DEVOTIONAL READING—Psalms 48.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Genesis 39:

41.

Thirteen long years have passed since his brethren sold him. They have been years of fiery testing for Joseph, but his faith is triumphant. There is a mighty contrast between Joseph in the pit at Dothan and Joseph as prime minister of Egypt.

I. Joseph Made Prime Minister of Egypt (vv. 38-44).

1. The Occasion (vv. 14-32).

It is the interpretation of Pharaoh's dreams. In his dreams Pharaoh saw seven fat kine coming out of the river, followed by seven lean ones, which devoured the fat ones. This dream was followed by another in which he saw seven ears of corn come up on one stalk, rank and good, only to be devoured by seven thin ones. These dreams produced uneasiness in Pharaoh's mind. Being thus troubled over them he sent for the magicians and wise men of Egypt to interpret them to him. Upon their failure to interpret them, the chief butler calls to mind the prisoner who had interpreted his dreams two years before. Pharaoh hastily brings Joseph from prison and places his dreams before him. Joseph disclaims wisdom for himself, but confidently asserts his faith in the wisdom of God. God is pleased with those who will thus lean upon him in the crucial hour, and will never disappoint them (James 1:5). Little did Joseph's brethren, the Ishmaelites who carried him into Egypt, or Potiphar whose slave he became, realize what the future would bring to him. His years of suffering and waiting were part of God's plan for his discipline and education. It is God's law for those who would reign, that they suffer. "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him" (2 Timothy 2:12). Joseph's exaltation from the state of humility is a fine illustration of Christ's humility and exaltation (Philippians 2:9, 10).

II. Joseph's Naturalization (v. 45).

As soon as Pharaoh thus exalted him he changed his name to Zaphnath-paaneah, an Egyptian word having varying designations; as "Salvation of the world," "The prince of life of the world," "The revealer of secrets," "The food of life," etc. No doubt it was Pharaoh's purpose to designate him as the preserver of life, the revealer of secrets, the interpreter of dreams, and the author of the plan by which Egypt was saved from the awful famine. He thus was naturalized, and his civil status rendered compatible with his official rank. Then Asenath, the daughter of the priest, was given him to wife. Intermarriage with this caste completed his naturalization by elevating him to social position. Joseph's elevation was to save the world from famine. Christ's elevation was to save the world from spiritual death. All unknown to his brethren, the Jews, Christ is now at the right hand of the Father, the Savior of the world from its famine of death. As Joseph received a gentle bride in the time of his rejection and exaltation, so Christ is now receiving a gentle bride (Romans 11:25).

III. Joseph's Wise Administration (vv. 46-49).

He first made a careful survey of the land, then organized his forces and looked after the details of the work. He did not use his power and position for himself, but to save others. He did not idle his time away, for he knew that only seven short years remained in which to work.

TEMPERANCE NOTES Josephus Daniels on Prohibition

"The business world and the governmental officials as well are learning that temperance spells efficiency, and that the only certain way to the highest efficiency is through the prohibition of the alcoholic liquor traffic. No man was ever made more efficient by liquor; many have their efficiency impaired and decreased, and many others have destroyed totally their efficiency. The temperance force of America is now engaged in a mighty struggle that will end in the passage of the prohibition amendment submitted by the Congress, and then we will have a country free entirely from the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquor, which has touched almost every family to its hurt. Lincoln said this country could not exist 'half slave and half free.' It took a war to put his theory into operation. America cannot secure the highest efficiency half prohibition and half license. We now have much more than half the territory under prohibition. The fight will be waged until on not a foot of land in America will there be a still or saloon."

When They Try It They Like It

The proof of prohibition is in the experience.

Some States have gone dry with the disapproval of their big cities. Washington State was one. In 1914 it went dry by 18,632. The wets carried Seattle by 14,000. In 1916, on a second referendum, the State voted dry again by a big majority, to which Seattle contributed heavily.

ANOTHER PHENOM EXPLODED

Every baseball season sees some widely press agent phenom exploded. And there is usually very little variation in the story. He begins with a rush that promises to set the league afire and simply mows down everything before him. For a couple of weeks or a month, sometimes longer, this continues. Then he goes all to pieces, from bad to worse and from worse to the bushes. The answer invariably is that he has a weakness, and the gang have got onto it and made life miserable for him. So it was with Prussianism and Germany. Germany started out like a four time winner. She broke down all opposition, romped through Belgium and half way to Paris before Foch got next to her weakness at the Marne. Then came the first decisive slump. Thereafter came a season of varying fortunes of war. Germany tried out every trick of the game. Used everything she had. Stopped at nothing. Disregarded all rules and taunted the bleacherites. Even put off international law out of the umpire's box. And finally collapsed in regular phenom style. Now Kaiser Bill, manager, has gone to the bushes. Germany is out of it. Prussianism has lost the job of martial trainer. And the game's over, thank God. But there is a lot of peace-making to do as a result. There is a lot of rebuilding of teams necessary. There are bruises and sore spots to work out. And big league rules must be drastically revised. The big league conference will iron out these differences shortly. But meantime somebody has to keep the grounds in order. That's partly Uncle Samuel's job. And we will have to pay the freight in part. Replenish the old yarn sock; another loan's coming.

SEND U. S. TROOPS TO FIUME

Americans Ordered to Occupy City in Hungary in Name of Allies to Restore Order.

Flume, Hungary, Nov. 25.—It is reported here that American troops have been ordered to occupy Flume in the name of the allies to restore order.

Victor Fisher, founder of the British Workers' League, in making a tour of redeemed Italian territories, has visited Flume since the Hungarian governor left the city. Speaking on the situation, he says that it is of extreme delicacy. Danger is arising out of the unexpected occupation of the city by considerable bodies of Jugo Slav soldiers, most of whom were Croatian troops and until quite recently fighting in the Austrian army. In addition to this the local Jugo Slav committee, while disarming the Italian population, has formed armed civil guards from Jugo Slavs living in the outskirts of the town.

U-Boats Haul Down Hun Flag.

Harwich, England.—In the presence of Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, 28 more U-boats surrendered. This was the most imposing flotilla to haul down the German flag thus far. It included several very large submarines and four of the cruiser type, one being nearly 350 feet in length. The noted cruiser submarine Deutschland U-153 was among the number. She had been rescued from the American cargo ship Ticonderoga, torpedoed on September 30 last.

The Law of Life.
How can God fill with his own that which is already filled by man? First it must be emptied before it may be filled with the true good of righteousness and truth, of humility and love, of peace and joy.—Howard Pyle.

Pleasure, mere pleasure, is animal.
God gives that to the butterfly. But progress is the law of life to the immortal. So God has arranged our life as progress, and its working principle is evolution.—Henry Drummond.

"Black Coffee For Two"

A Thanksgiving Tale
by Mary Graham Bonner

HOSE letters can wait until Friday, Miss Johnson. Tomorrow we're closed, you know."

"Very well, sir," said Miss Johnson.

"You don't seem to be especially pleased," continued Mr. Brown. "Most of the girls welcome a holiday. They can sleep and then go out dancing with some fine young man. Ain't you got a young man, Miss Johnson? Perhaps you've not been long enough in the city. Well, well, take your time. There's a lot of these youngsters who can make love all right, all right, but when it comes to furnishing the home—they'd have a hard time doing it on the installment plan. The salaries of young men ain't so big these days."

Mr. Brown was manager of the Jones & Cushing Wholesale Glass and Crockery company. He was a large gentleman with watery blue eyes, fat lips and pudgy hands.

"I suppose you'll be missing the old folks, eh?" continued the gentleman.

"I guess I will miss them," said Miss Johnson, with letters and notebook in hand. "It will be the first Thanksgiving I've been away. You see I took my course at business college last winter and went home for the summer."

"To be sure," said Mr. Brown. "It's only two months since you came here, but you've won your way into our hearts," he added with a leer.

"And I know how you feel," he went on. "Just longing for the old folks and the kids. How'd you like some real turkey, eh? Well, we'll have it. You're only a child to me. I'm old enough to be your father."

And with a look such as no father has ever given before or since, Mr. Brown moved his chair a little nearer. "How about a Thanksgiving dinner with me tomorrow night? My wife has gone to see her old mother, who is down sick. So let's keep each other company, eh? And have real turkey. What do you say?

"We'll go to one of the swell places where there'll be cranberry sauce, too. And we'll hear music when we eat, that is if we get those noiseless soupspoons." Mr. Brown thought he was a humorous man.

"I guess I'll go," said Miss Johnson slowly.

"Good! I'll call for you at six sharp and you have a good sleep and write home to the folks that you're going out with a nice safe old fatherly man from the office." Mr. Brown really flattered himself that he was neither old nor safe.

Miss Johnson had closed the door and gone to put her books and letters back in her desk. Mr. Courtney, one of the salesmen and Mr. Brown's right-hand man, had noticed a slight flush on her face as she had passed him. He wondered if it could be possible that Mr. Brown had invited her to spend the holiday with him. But the idea vanished and just at that moment he was called to the telephone. The other girls had gone to the cloakroom and Miss Johnson entered as they were preparing for the outside world.

"What are you going to do tomorrow, Johnny?" asked Miss Marks. It was the name the girls had given her. "I don't know just yet," she answered.

"Bill and I are going to a Thanksgiving ball," remarked Miss Angela Carter. "And I've got a swell new dress mother's making me."

There was a general discussion as to the ways the holiday would be spent and at the downstairs door Miss Johnson separated from her companions and went over to the elevated.

"Courtney," called Mr. Brown.

"Yes, sir," he answered.

"Did that new shipment come in today?"

"No sir," said Mr. Courtney. "I don't believe we'll get it in until Monday now."

"Oh, all right, I just wondered. Say, young man, don't look so glum. Get a pretty girl and go off for the day tomorrow. You need cheering up. It's what I need, too. And I'll have it, believe me. I've got a little peach for dinner. Quite a sport for an old boy eh?"

"Hello," she said.

"Oh, good-morning. Miss Johnson," came the voice from the other end. "I hope I didn't get you up out of bed No? You're not a late sleeper even on a holiday? Well, I always knew you were smart. Just thought I'd call you."

"Quite," said Mr. Courtney, quietly. "I don't care much for girls, that is, most girls."

"Hum," grunted Mr. Brown as the younger man left his office. "Falling in love, eh? She'll soon tire of him, whoever she may be, if he doesn't get a smile on his face once in a while."

"Has Miss Johnson left?" Mr. Courtney was asking of one of the stenographers who was hurrying off.

"Yes, left five minutes ago," was the answer.

"You haven't got her home address?" he asked.

"No, but I guess Mr. Brown has it. He keeps the addresses of the whole staff, you know." And she was gone.

Miss Johnson boarded with friends her mother had met during her one city trip—a week's excursion which had taken in the Hippodrome and the Flatiron building as wonders never to be forgotten. Usually she took her dinner downtown at a cheap table d'hôte, for Mrs. Palmer, her mother's friend, did not care much for cooking—and besides it had been arranged that way—room and breakfast, five dollars a week. But tonight she would go straight home without dinner. Perhaps they would be making preparations for the great day. She bought an evening paper, two bananas and a sweetened roll and started up the elevated stairs.

She reached home and opened the door with her latchkey. From every indication every one was out. She called for Mrs. Palmer but no reply came.

Miss Johnson ate her meager repast and then went to the kitchen for a drink of water. Her meal had been dry and somehow it choked her a little. Everything was so hard to swallow. Or was it that the lump in her throat got in the way?

At last ten o'clock came and Mrs. Palmer walked in. "Oh," said Miss Johnson, "I came home early tonight to know if I could help you with the dinner tomorrow. I'm going out myself. But mother has always said I was handy with the dressing."

"Dressing? Dinner?" repeated Mrs. Palmer in amazement. "Oh, land, child, I don't go to no fuss for Thanksgiving giving! What's the use? I just says I'm going to dinner with Mr. Brown of the firm," she said. "He's a father of children—not young and worthless."

She laughed a little.

"That's good," said Mrs. Palmer. "But what's he doing taking you out today? Where's his kids?"

"Away to see a sick grandmother," said Lydia, and as she said it she felt that Mrs. Palmer nodded her head a little too understandingly. Lydia flushed slightly.

"Now, listen, dearie," said Mrs. Palmer, "to a word of motherly advice. Get all that's comin' to you. They think more of you when you make 'em spend—and if he's old enough to be a father—and take you out—he's likely got enough of the wherewithal. Say you like white furs. Tell him in a real baby tone you did wish you could have a silver mesh bag. While I promised your mother I'd look after you, the city's ways aren't the country's ways—leastwise, not so I know it. And I want to see you get on." She was thinking secretly of a new rug she might like herself. "Just work the old boy for all he's worth, but take my advice, and never fall in love. They're done with you then, and you lose interest in others."

Lydia had sat partly listening and partly dreaming of the Thanksgiving at home—the long table, her father's jokes, the children's ceaseless chatter, her mother hot and tired but beaming. She arose. "I'll be careful," she said as she bit her lip. "I won't fall in love. Don't worry, Mrs. Palmer, I'm not so young as you might think."

She went to her room and closed her door with a bang. Then softly opened it. An hour went by and then another. Still another passed and Lydia was growing impatient. Her hat and gloves and coat were ready. She sat there, nervous and shaking. At last she heard Mrs. Palmer's shrill voice:

"Lydia, Lydia."

Lydia closed the door softly and then opened it noisily. "Yes," she called back.

"I'm just going over to see the pictures for an hour. I'll be back in time to fuss you up bit for tonight. Don't worry. I'll only be gone an hour."

"All right, thank you, Mrs. Palmer," she called.

She waited five minutes, then ten and at last put on her things. Quietly she stole down the stairs. She opened the door, looked up and down the street and then hurriedly walked along.

"I guess," she said slowly to herself. "I'll go downtown." And she went up the stairs to the elevated.

"I suppose I'll have to eat," she thought grimly.

Usually Rast's table d'hôte was crowded. There people were always standing waiting for seats, looking annoyed and envious of those who were almost finished but who took so long over their coffee. Their expressions read quite plainly. But Mr. Rast was genial and always held his crowds by a suave smile and a confidential manner of saying to each customer, "I'll have a table in just a moment for you."

Miss Johnson went down the stairs without hurrying. She had never acquired the habit of running to the telephone as if it were on fire and must be put out by lifting the receiver.

"Hello," she said.

"Oh, good-morning. Miss Johnson," came the voice from the other end. "I hope I didn't get you up out of bed No? You're not a late sleeper even on a holiday? Well, I always knew you were smart. Just thought I'd call you."

"Lydia! Lydia Johnson!" same Mrs. Palmer's voice from downstairs. "A gentleman to speak to you on the phone."

MADISON COUNTY Blue Lick

Blue Lick, Nov. 25.—On the day that the thrilling news of Peace penetrated the pine woods surrounding the little valley of Blue Lick, set like an emerald in jeweled hills reflecting the sunlight, the spirit of Patriotism and Liberty suddenly flamed up and a clear singing note of Americanism found vibrant expression in the form of explosives and joyous shouts, while the humble laborers in the fields lustily sang snatches of the "Star Spangled Banner" and "My Old

Rehabilitation of Soldiers Is Work Immediately Ahead

The great battle for the salvation of the world from German Kultur is not "over and done with" for a good many thousands of the men who have been fighting it, and consequently it is not "over and done with" for the Americans who have been backing them at home.

These thousands are coming back from the battle fields wounded and disabled. Their sacrifices will be continued throughout their lives.

But the sacrifice will be lessened as much as possible by the greatest surgical ability of the world, and by the money of the country.

A considerable part of the last Liberty Loan funds will be used in such rehabilitation work as the world never dreamed of in past years. It will include surgery, artificial limbs, medical services, and finally vocational training which will enable the soldier to take up his life again and make it of value to himself and society.

The picture above shows one retrained soldier for whom a mechanical arm application makes it possible to work in a chemical laboratory.

It is God's gift, and our victory. Let everybody celebrate and participate in the universal joy. Grim care, moroseness, anxiety, hate, and fear, ought all be relegated to the oblivion of the past and scoured off by the "oil of joy," proving that the spirit of Liberty and Brotherly Love is the sweetest, most lovely characteristic that dominates American people.
